BASIC REGULATIONS

1a) Provision of a "probationary period" in the employment contract (Article 4/ Article 8 of EU Directive 2019/1152)

The concept of a probationary period and a probationary employee in paid employment is introduced.

Under the new regulation of article 4, which adds article 1A in PD 80/2022 [Code of Individual Employment Law] the following are provided:

a) the employer is entitled when concluding an employment contract of indefinite time, to agree with the employee on a trial period, up to 6 months, during which the employment relation is in probation.

This employment relationship may develop in the following ways:

(i) in the case of a successful probationary period and continuation of the employment relationship, the date of commencement of the employment relationship shall be the initial hiring date.

(ii) if, either during the probationary period or after it has elapsed, the employer considers the latter to be unsuccessful, the contract shall be automatically terminated and the term of service until termination is considered employment time as far as the employees' rights are concerned.

It is noted that from the combination of articles 4 and 19, it follows that in the event of a probationary period agreed in an employment contract of indefinite time, this does not affect the minimum period of twelve (12) months required for the establishment of the employees' right to severance pay, in which it is counted.

b) when concluding a fixed-term employment contract, the employer may agree to a probationary period corresponding to the total time provided for in the contract, which may not exceed $\frac{1}{4}$ of the total period of employment, up to a maximum of six (6) months. It is provided that in the event of renewal of the contract for the same post, no new probationary period may be provided for.

Furthermore, during the probationary period, the protective provisions for the employee (Articles 162-179 of PD 80/2022) on working time (daily rest, annual leave, night work) are applicable.

1b) Possibility for the employee to request a transission to another form of employment (Article 11/ Article 12 of EU Directive 2019/1152)

Based on article 11, which adds article 69A in PD 80/2022, it is provided that an employee with at least six (6) months of service with the same employer and who has completed the probationary period, is entitled to request the amendment of his/her employment agreement into one with more predictable and secure working conditions, if such employment is possible.

In this case, the employer is obliged to provide to the employee with a reasoned written reply, within one (1) month from the submission of the request at the latest, unless the employer is a natural person or a micro, small or medium enterprise, in which case the above deadline is two (2) months.

2) Parallel employment (Article 9/ Article 9 of EU Directive 2019/1152)

This new regulation of article 9, which is being added to article 189 of PD 80/2022, provides that an employee is allowed to work for two employers (parallel employment), subject to the current provisions on minimum rest periods.

Furthermore, agreements or clauses prohibiting the provision of taking up employment with other employers, outside the working hours agreed with a particular employer are inhibited, unless the restriction in question is justified by objective grounds, e.g. health and safety, protection of business confidentiality or working in a competing business or avoiding a conflict of interest.

Agreements or clauses prohibiting the provision of taking up employment with other employers shall be void.

A decision of the Minister of Labour and Social Security shall determine any necessary issues concerning the information to be provided to the employer regarding the existence of parallel employment and any special issues related to the application of this provision.

3) Unpredictable work – On demand employment agreements (Article 10/ Article 10 and 11 of EU Directive 2019/1152)

Under the new provision of article 11, which adds article 182A in PD 80/2022, "on demand employment agreements" are regulated by law, whereby the parties agree on a minimum number of paid working hours that cannot be less than $\frac{1}{4}$ of the agreed total number of working hours.

Specifically the law provides for the following:

a) Where an employees' work pattern is entirely or mostly unpredictable, the employee is obliged to agree to work for the employer, on the one hand, if the work takes place within predetermined reference hours and days, and the employee on the other hand has been informed of a work assignment (in writing, by mobile phone message or e-mail or other appropriate means) within a notice period that cannot be less than 24 hours before the commencement of work (excluding cases objectively justifying less notice period)

b) If, on the contrary, the conditions of paragraph a. are not fulfilled, the employee has the right to refuse a work assignment, and any discrimination against him/her by the employer for having exercised this right is restricted.

Furthermore, it is provided that in the event of cancellation of the assignment by the employer at any time after the employees' notice, the latter is entitled to compensation equal to the hourly wages of the hours not assigned.

Moreover, it is provided that all the provisions protecting the worker linked to his/her contract or employment relationship, are applicable in this case.

Any unilateral conversion by the employer of a full-time or part-time employment contract into an on demand employment agreement is prohibited as a unilateral harmful change of working conditions.

4) Free provision of compulsory training (Articles 12/ Article 13 of EU Directive 2019/1152)

In article 12, which adds article 70A in PD 80/2022, provision is made for training free of cost, in case the employer's obligation to provide it to the employee arises from the applicable labour legislation, in order to carry out work for which he/she is employed.

In this case, the training, according to the wording of the article, is counted as working time and takes place during the contractual working hours, where possible.

5) Provision of information- Timing and means of information (Articles 5/ Articles 3 and 5 of EU Directive 2019/1152)

Article 5, which modifies article 71 of PD 80/2022, provides for the following:

4. The employer communicates the information on the provisions of the employment laws governing the minimum terms of remuneration and employment, free of charge in a clear, transparent, comprehensive and easily accessible way at a distance and by electronic means, including through existing online portals.

6) Employer's obligations to provide information - Essential conditions (Articles 6/ Article 4 of EU Directive 2019/1152)

According to Article 6, which modifies article 70 of PD 80/2022, the terms of the employment agreement which the employer is obliged to communicate to the employee are extended to cover the new provisions. Specifically, the essential terms of the contract which the employer is obliged to communicate to the employee are defined in the above article, as follows:
